And then there were four....

Today's Gift: "Dare to Differentiate"

In light of the training that fourth grade has received, I feel that this is a perfect resource not only for them, but for all of us who look to find ways to differentiate in the classroom.

This wiki is broken down into topics and strategies and offers a very nice blend between technology resources simple resources that discuss best practice. I STRONGLY recommend visiting this site, I think it has some really great resources that I can see being used in your classroom, regardless of the grade that you teach.

The wiki offers 100's of templates, worksheets, and presentations that you can use to get started. In addition, it has multiple resources for professional development.
